About TheEdCollab

The Educator Collaborative, LLC, is a K-12 literacy think tank and educational consulting organization working to innovate the ways educators learn together. We aim to serve children and the adults who teach, learn, and grow alongside them. We believe there is no greater professional development than hands-on-practice and conversation in the company of engaged educators.

We provide on-site, standards-aligned, literacy professional development services to schools, districts, national conferences, local reading councils, and universities. This includes speaking services and site-based professional development. We also host a number of innovative, online, professional learning opportunities that connect educators around the world to one another and to today's leading voices in literacy, and digital literacy, research and practice

The organization was founded and is led by internationally recognized literacy educator and New York Times best-selling author, Christopher Lehman, and is comprised of a team of national literacy experts.

Our Research Basis

The Educator Collaborative is both a professional development provider and a think tank. This allows us to bring both foundational and cutting-edge research to the professional learning opportunities we provide for educators. Our think tank is made up of recognized and emerging voices in literacy pedagogy, whose professional writing, speaking, and study informs all we do.

Our practice is informed by research into child and adolescent literacy, including:

- Responsive, student-centered, and literacy rich classrooms (Allington, 2011; Atwell, 2014; Biancarosa & Snow, 2006; Calkins, 1994, 2001; Clay, 2014; Fountas & Pinnell, 2000; Graham & Perin, 2007; Graves, 2003; Kame'enui & Baumann, 2012; Lehman & Roberts, 2013; Linder, 2016; Miller, 2009),
- Digital media literacy skills that support students in making active meaning in today's digital landscape (Common Sense Media, 2016; Hicks, 2013; ISTE, 2016; Light & Polin, 2010; Muhtaris & Ziemke, 2015),
- and Culturally Sustaining Pedagogy that supports all children in linguistic, cultural, and social justice oriented growth through literacy teaching and learning (Ladson-Billings, 1995; Paris, 2012; Paris & Alim, 2017; Scott & Purdum-Cassidy, 2016; Teaching Tolerance, 2014).

Additionally, we are informed by research into adult learning and school growth, which informs our structures, methods, and practice, including:

- Long-term, intensive, job-based adult learning (Garet et al, 2001; Supovitz, Mayer, & Kahle, 2000; Weiss & Pasley, 2006; Yoon et al, 2007),
- Teaming and "coherence" with a school's goals and community (Darling-Hammond and Richardson, 2009; Hargreaves & Fullan, 2012; Snow-Renner & Lauer, 2005),
- and a Balance of hands-on practice, feedback, and theory (Darling-Hammond and Richardson, 2009; Garet et al, 2001).

In-School Professional Development

To promote educator's growth and practice, while developing an atmosphere of trust and collaboration, our School Day models are built on research and best-practices in professional learning. A focus on developing a learning community within the school is paramount, created through teaming, inquiry, and feedback. Consultants work closely with leaders and other stakeholders to design a series of learning days that will move your school's goals to your school's growth.

Research says that long-term, multi-session professional learning is the most effective for educator and student growth. Across multiple sessions, TheEdCollab consultant(s) will work with leaders to use a variety of proven structures:

1. Labsite and Meeting Sessions for Educator Teams
2. 1-1 Coaching Across Classrooms
3. Leadership Support
4. Full/Partial Day Workshops (including After School)

It is this balance of touch-points and methods, along with support for the full staff (including leaders), that leads to the most effective and efficient gains.

Location: Within a school's classrooms. Large districts may select multiple schools as central locations for other staff to travel. We are happy to work with you and share models for both large and small districts.

Time: 1-12+ days. Recommended: minimum of 6.

Cost: $2,000-4,000/day, inclusive. Price dependent on staff, location, and number of days.

To Contract: Complete our request form at TheEducatorCollaborative.com/Contact or call us (929) 500-2096

“The staff loves when you come! They feel free to take risks with you. And you are super clear, you help them see and believe they can do it!”

*If location is within close proximity to a requested speaker, some booking may be negotiated as per hour. Contact us with questions.

Half or Full Workshop Days

To move deeply into a topic with participants, our staff can provide half or full day workshops on a variety of topics. These workshops, like all of our work, provide a research-based balanced of theory and practice. We involve participants in the study and content and pedagogy, using real-classroom examples, work, and texts. Educators leave workshops with TheEdCollab feeling inspired—and ready—to incorporate new methods and practices into their teaching, coaching, or leadership.

Time: Bookings are made on a per day basis.* Available for 3-6 hours of events, per day.

Cost: $2,500-6,000/day, inclusive. Price dependent on staff, location, and number of days.

Free Learning

We give back to the global educator community through a variety of free events. Purchases of paid services help to support their continuation as well as the volunteer efforts of many who join us each year.

The “Gathering”

Our biannual, free, no-registration, day of learning! Keynotes, invited guests, and submitted proposal sessions showcase literacy learning all streaming for free (and then archived for several months. Every September and April, thousands of educators from over 20 countries tune in. View or even submit a session proposal!
